Subject: submission on the application by novozymes australia

To Whom It May Concern,
Dear Sir/Madam,

In relation to the application by Novozymes Australia to put the genetically modified enzyme Xylanase out for use in bread making I strongly object on the grounds there are no long term studies on the effect of genetically modified organisms on the human body.

The use of these genetically modified organisms also threatens the Organic Producers by virtue of the fact that when any genetically modified organism gets into their produce (whether it be agricultural or into feed fed to cattle , sheep etc) they lose their livelihood because they lose their organic classification.

If for some reason then I request the ruling be made that the labelling of the bread that has that genetically modified organism used in its production be in large letters at least four inches high and in a colour that can not blend in with other writing on the packaging and if that ruling is not adhered to then the offending company/s are fined heavily and made to do public announcements on tv, radio and in newspapers.

Thank you

Mrs Margaret Anne Ryan
