To whom it concerns,

We are only scratching the surface of understanding the human body. The incredible number of adverse reactions to the new gene therapy vaccines is a case in point and has bearing on the GMO issue. One might have figured out by this time that GMO food offers the same challenge to the human body. Too little testing has been done to know these products are long term safe. By un-labelling GMO products, you would be opening Pandora's Box and subjecting people everywhere to a food lottery between the proven safe and efficacious versus who knows what. Only a fool would think that to be a good idea--or one whose greed overrides any concern for human health. Make the right choice because your health and that of your children is going to depend on it.

Thank you for taking my well-founded and informed concerns into consideration.

Yours sincerely,
